

BOOK 1 OF THE HOLLOW DOMINION

THE DREAMING GATE

A D&D 5e Adventure for Levels 1-3

3-4 Sessions | 3-5 Players

by Helm Evans

Tuco Enterprises

ADVENTURE SUMMARY

A kingdom cursed by the death-throes of a dreaming god

BACKGROUND

The players are drawn to the Hollow Dominion by a shared dream — a vision of a dying god calling for help. Upon arrival, they discover the kingdom is cursed by the death-throes of Mordath, the Dreaming God. The landscape warps unpredictably, nightmare creatures stalk the roads, and the populace is divided between those fighting to survive and those who've given in to madness.

The players discover they are Dreambound — souls tethered to Mordath's fading consciousness, marked by a glowing sigil. They cannot leave until the curse is broken — and if Mordath dies without resolution, they die with him.

The adventure spans three parts: arrival at the Ashen Gate, investigation in the town of Drearym, and the climactic assault on the Gatehouse of Dreams.

ADVENTURE DETAILS

System	D&D 5e
Levels	1-3
Sessions	3-4
Players	3-5
Tone	Dark fantasy mystery

FACTIONS

Waking Guard	Soldiers maintaining order
Dreamseekers	Cultists seeking freedom
Veil Court	Surviving nobility
The Unbound	Nightmare-consumed victims

ADVENTURE HOOK: THE SHARED DREAM

"For three nights running, you've had the same dream. A vast chamber of white stone, a figure on a throne robed in starlight, its face hidden behind a mask of cracked porcelain. It speaks: 'Come. Please. Before it is too late.' On the fourth day, you each find a mark on your skin — a glowing sigil shaped like an eye within a crescent moon."

PART 1: THE ASHEN GATE

The entrance to the Hollow Dominion — and the point of no return

DANGER ●●○○○

ARRIVAL

"The archway rises from the mist like a broken tooth. Once-grand stone, now cracked and leaking purple dream-energy that makes your sigil burn warm. Beyond the gate, trees grow sideways and the road shifts when you're not looking."

The Ashen Gate is the only known entrance to the Hollow Dominion. Passing through it is a one-way trip — the gate does not allow return travel. The purple energy is raw dream-stuff leaking from Mordath's dying mind. Characters who touch it must make a DC 12 WIS save or experience a brief, disorienting vision of Mordath's throne room: a vast white chamber, a cracked porcelain mask, and a voice whispering "find the three keys."

Eldon Voss — The Gatekeeper, former captain of the Waking Guard

ENCOUNTER: ELDON VOSS, THE GATEKEEPER

An old man sits on a mossy stone beside the gate, whittling a piece of wood with a rusted knife. His guard captain's uniform is tattered and faded, but the insignia — a golden sun over a crossed sword — is still visible. His eyes are sharp despite the grey stubble and the thousand-yard stare. He looks up as you approach, and his gaze locks onto the glowing sigils on your skin.

"You're Dreambound. Welcome to the nightmare, friends. Mind the roads after dark. Things come through from the Dreaming Depths when the sun goes down."

Eldon is a font of information — but his mind is fractured. He drifts between lucid moments and confused rambling. When focused, he can provide detailed directions, warn about dangerous thin points, and explain the faction tensions between the Waking Guard and Dreamseekers. When confused, he relives battles from six months ago, speaking to soldiers who are long dead.

- ◆ The Dominion has been cursed for six months — since Mordath began dying
- ◆ The landscape warps unpredictably — paths change, distances stretch, landmarks move
- ◆ Nightmare creatures emerge at dusk from thin points where dream-energy leaks through
- ◆ The Waking Guard maintain order in Drearym; the Dreamseekers want Mordath dead
- ◆ "Don't sleep near running water — that's where the nightmares come through strongest."
- ◆ Three days' travel from the Gate to Drearym along the Twisted Road
- ◆ The Dreamseekers are "harvesting" Dreambound — converting them into Unbound

Social Encounter: DC 12 Persuasion to get Eldon to share specific information. DC 10 Insight to tell when he's lucid vs. rambling. If shown kindness (food, healing, respectful conversation), he gives the party a hand-drawn map of the Twisted March showing safe paths and dangerous thin points (advantage on Survival checks during travel).

If attacked: Eldon fights defensively, using his club and calling out to the Waking Guard outpost (2d4 guards arrive in 1d4 rounds). He does not fight to the death — he surrenders at half HP, confused and hurt.

DM NOTE

Eldon was once a respected captain of the Waking Guard. The curse broke his mind but fragments of wisdom remain. He knows the safe paths, the dangerous thin points, and the general layout of the Twisted March. If the party is hostile, he becomes incoherent and unhelpful. If they earn his trust, he becomes a recurring source of information and can send messages to Captain Ashford in Drearym.

THE TWISTED MARCH

Three days through nightmare-ravaged countryside

DANGER ●●●○○

THE TWISTED ROAD

The road from the Ashen Gate to Drearym is called the Twisted March — a three-day journey through forest that has been warped by Mordath's dying dreams. Trees grow at impossible angles, their branches reaching toward a sky that shifts between twilight and starless night. Streams run purple with dream-energy, and the distance between landmarks changes depending on the time of day. The air itself feels thick and wrong, pressing against the skin like warm water. Sounds carry strangely — a whisper can echo for miles, while a shout is swallowed by the mist.

The party's Dreambound sigils burn warmer as they travel deeper into the Dominion, a constant reminder that they are tethered to a dying god. Travel is slow: 12 miles per day instead of the normal 24, as the landscape itself seems to resist passage. Paths loop back on themselves, hills rise and fall like breathing things, and the stars above rearrange into patterns that hurt to look at.

DAY 1 — THE WAKING GUARD OUTPOST

Halfway through the first day, the party reaches a fortified camp of sharpened logs and canvas tents. Four Waking Guard soldiers man the perimeter, their faces grim but relieved to see living travelers. The outpost commander, Sergeant Dara Voss (Eldon's niece), offers safe rest, rations, and information. She confirms that the Dreamseekers have been "recruiting" Dreambound in the eastern villages — and that those who join don't come back the same. She warns the party to avoid the Wellspring after dark: "We lost two men there last week. Whatever's in that well, it pulls you in."

DAY 2 — THE RUINED TOWER OF VALDRIS

The second day's travel brings the party to the ruins of a wizard's tower, now consumed by dream-energy. The stone walls shift between solid rock and translucent purple crystal. Inside, DC 14 Investigation finds a hidden journal page: "Mordath spoke to us in dreams. He said: 'I have seen my death. It comes not from enemies, but from within. The Architect stirs in my dreams. It wants to wear my crown.' We did not understand. Now we never will." A successful DC 12 Arcana check reveals that the tower was once a research station for studying dream-energy — and that the thin point here is growing stronger.

DAY 3 — APPROACHING DREARYM

The final day's travel is the most dangerous. The warping intensifies, and the party may encounter Unbound shambling through the trees — former Dreambound who were consumed by nightmare energy. The walls of Drearym appear on the horizon by late afternoon, a welcome sight after three days in the twisted forest. But the guards at the gate are wary, and the party's Dreambound marks will be noted.

D	8
E	v	e n t
1	Shifting Path: DC 12 Survival or lose 1d4 hours + 1 exhaustion.
2	Dream Echo: One player sees Mordath before the curse. DC 13 WIS or 1 exhaustion.
3	Nightmare Wolf: Attacks from treeline. Flees at half HP.
4	Traveler: Refugee warns Dreamseekers are harvesting Dreambound.
5	Dream Shimmer: Find the three keys. DC 14 WIS or 2d6 psychic.
6	Waking Guard Outpost: Safe rest, rations, information.
7	Thin Point: Purple pool. DC 13 CON or pulled into dream vision.
8	Peaceful Stretch: Clean water, mushrooms. Recover 1 exhaustion.

MAP: THE TWISTED MARCH

Regional map — Ashen Gate to Drearym

The Twisted March — Forest clearing with purple pools marking thin points between worlds. Paths wind between camps, ruins, and dangerous thin points.

LANDMARKS

- ◆ Ashen Gate (South): Entry point. Meet Eldon Voss. The point of no return.
- ◆ Waking Guard Outpost: Day 1. Sergeant Dara Voss commands 4 guards. Safe haven.
- ◆ The Wellspring: Day 1-2. Ancient well leaking purple energy. Side quest: rescue Lissa Greel.
- ◆ Ruined Tower of Valdris: Day 2. Wizard's tower consumed by dream-energy. Hidden journal page inside.
- ◆ Purple Pools: Thin points scattered along the road. Nightmare creatures emerge after dark.
- ◆ Drearym (North): Day 3. First major town. Faction tensions between Waking Guard and Dreamseekers.

PART 2: THE TOWN OF DREARYM

A town on the edge of collapse

DANGER ●●●○○

ARRIVAL

"Drearym was once a prosperous market town of 2,000. Now it holds perhaps 800. A makeshift wall of sharpened logs surrounds the town. Purple mist hovers in the alleys. Some buildings lean at impossible angles. People eye your Dreambound marks with pity and suspicion."

The town is under martial law. The Waking Guard controls the gates and checks everyone entering. The party's Dreambound marks will be noted — some townsfolk will be hostile, others desperate for help. The purple-tinged water flowing through the streets is a constant reminder that the curse reaches even here.

A — THE VIGOROUS DOG (INN)

A ramshackle two-story building with a painted sign of a running dog, its paint peeling and faded. The common room is warm but crowded with refugees huddled around a crackling fireplace. The smell of stew and unwashed bodies fills the air. Marta Greel runs the place with a firm hand, a hand crossbow always within reach under the bar. Rooms are 5sp/night — basic but clean. She offers 50gp for the safe return of her daughter Lissa, who went missing near the Wellspring three days ago. Marta is a former adventurer — she lost her left leg to a nightmare creature six months ago and walks with a carved peg leg. She's blunt, practical, and fiercely protective of the town. "If you find my girl, bring her home. I don't care if she's scared or confused — just bring her home."

B — WAKING GUARD BARRACKS

A fortified stone building near the north gate, flying the Waking Guard's sun banner. The barracks is the nerve center of Drearym's defense — Captain Rena Ashford commands 12 soldiers from here, coordinating patrols and managing the town's dwindling supplies. She's stern but fair, and she's been holding the town together through sheer will for six months. She asks the party to investigate nightmare sightings on the eastern road (30gp reward). She warns them about Brother Caelum: "That priest is going to get people killed with his talk of killing the god. If Mordath dies, every Dreambound dies with him — including you." The barracks has a locked armory (DC 15 to pick) containing spare weapons, armor, and a Potion of Healing.

C — OLD TOWN CHAPEL

Once a peaceful house of worship dedicated to Mordath, now the meeting place of the Dreamseekers. The old holy symbols have been defaced and replaced with crescent moon sigils painted in what looks like purple dye (but smells faintly of blood). Brother Caelum preaches to crowds of desperate Dreambound every evening at dusk, telling them that killing Mordath will "free" them from the curse. He's charismatic, passionate, and genuinely believes he's saving people — but he's being manipulated by The Architect, an entity within Mordath's dreams that poses as a benevolent spirit. The chapel has a secret basement (DC 14 Perception to find the hidden door) with a ritual chamber where Caelum conducts his "sharing circles" — gatherings where Dreambound are slowly converted into Unbound.

DREARYM — KEY LOCATIONS

Town map and detailed location descriptions

D — MARKET SQUARE

The central gathering place of Drearym, once a bustling hub of trade, now a somber meeting point for the desperate. A weathered notice board holds missing persons flyers (including Lissa Greel's), bounty notices for nightmare creatures, and a Dreamseeker recruitment poster showing a crescent moon with the words "Freedom Awaits." Refugees have set up a makeshift camp in the eastern corner, trading information, supplies, and rumors. A hooded figure (DC 14 Perception to notice) watches the party from the shadows near the well — a Dreamseeker spy who reports their arrival to Brother Caelum within the hour. The market stalls sell basic supplies at inflated prices: rations (10sp), torches (5sp), rope (5sp).

E — THE WELLSPRING

An ancient stone well outside the eastern wall, now leaking purple dream-energy. The water has turned violet and bubbles with otherworldly light, casting shifting purple shadows on the surrounding stones. Lissa Greel was last seen here, sitting at the well's edge with eyes open but unseeing — trapped in a Dream Loop, reliving her favorite memory on repeat. The area is dangerous: 2 Nightmare Spawn guard the well, and more emerge after dark. Within 10ft of the well is difficult terrain (ground made soft and shifting by dream-energy). Within 5ft requires a DC 12 WIS save or be pulled 5ft toward the well. The well is 15ft deep, filled with purple liquid that glows faintly.

F — NORTH GATE

The main entrance to Drearym, controlled by the Waking Guard. Two guards in chain mail with sun-emblazoned tabards check everyone entering and leaving, noting Dreambound marks in a ledger. Curfew is enforced after sunset — anyone caught outside after dark is detained until dawn. The guards are sympathetic to Dreambound (many have family members who are marked) but follow Captain Ashford's orders without question. DC 12 Persuasion to pass without full inspection. The gate is reinforced with iron bands and can be barred in case of attack.

Drearym — Letters mark key locations. Purple water flows through the settlement. Waking Guard controls the north; Dreamseekers gather in the southeast chapel.

NPCS OF THE DOMINION

The god, the captain, the priest, and the innkeeper

Mordath — The Dreaming God, his divine form crumbling and leaking dream-energy

Captain Rena Ashford — Commander of the Waking Guard, holding Drearym together

Brother Caelum — Dreamseeker priest, charismatic but manipulated by The Architect

Marta Greel — Innkeeper of The Vigorous Dog, former adventurer, mother of Lissa

MARTA GREEL & THE DREAMING WELL

The innkeeper, the missing girl, and the nightmare spawn

MARTA GREEL — INNKEEPER

MEDIUM HUMANOID (HUMAN), CHAOTIC GOOD

STR	DEX	CON	INT	WIS	CHA
14	10	16	12	13	11
+2	+0	+3	+1	+1	+0

AC 12 | HP 27 (5d8+5) | Speed 20 ft. (peg leg)

Skills: Intimidation +2, Medicine +3, Survival +4

Equipment: Hand crossbow (+4, 1d6 piercing), peg leg (improvised, +4, 1d4+2)

ENCOUNTER: THE DREAMING WELL

The Wellspring is a thin point between the waking world and Mordath's dreams. Lissa Greel sits at the well's edge, eyes open but unseeing, trapped in a Dream Loop. 2 Nightmare Spawn (Shadows with purple tinges) guard the well.

Option 1 — Physical Pull: DC 14 STR. Nightmare Spawn attack. Failure = DC 13 WIS or stunned.

Option 2 — Enter the Dream: DC 13 WIS to enter. DC 13 Persuasion. Failure = 2d6 psychic.

Option 3 — Disrupt: DC 14 Arcana. Success = Spawn take 3d6 radiant. Failure = 2d6 psychic.

Nightmare Spawn — Shadow creatures touched by dream-energy, they drain the life force of the living

NIGHTMARE SPAWN (RESKINNED SHADOW)

MEDIUM UNDEAD, CHAOTIC EVIL

AC 12 | HP 16 (3d8+3) | Speed 40 ft.

Resist: Acid, Cold, Fire, Lightning, Thunder; B/P/S nonmagical

Vuln: Radiant (+1d6 from moonlight) | Immune: Exhaustion, Frightened, Grappled, Paralyzed, Petrified, Poisoned, Prone, Restrained

Strength Drain. +4 to hit, 2d6+2 psychic damage. STR reduced by 1d4. STR 0 = death, rises as Unbound in 1d4 rounds.

Nightmare Aura: Within 10ft, DC 11 WIS or frightened. Amorphous, Shadow Stealth

PART 3: THE GATEHOUSE OF DREAMS

The boundary between worlds

DANGER ●●●●○

The Gatehouse of Dreams — Ancient monastery built into the cliff, now consumed by dream-energy

THE GATEHOUSE

The Gatehouse of Dreams is a fortress built into the face of a sheer cliff — the last outpost of the waking world before the boundary dissolves into Mordath's consciousness. Once a peaceful monastery dedicated to the Dreaming God, it has been consumed by the very energy it once worshipped. Purple dream-stuff seeps through cracks in the stone walls, pooling on floors that shift between solid rock and liquid starlight. The four wings of the complex are connected by a central courtyard where a fountain of purple liquid bubbles endlessly, the sound echoing through the empty halls like a heartbeat. The air here is thick with psychic residue — characters may hear fragments of Mordath's dreams as whispers, or catch glimpses of visions that haven't happened yet. Dreamsense is amplified within the Gatehouse: all Dreambound creatures within 60 feet are automatically detected. The deeper the party ventures, the thinner the veil becomes, until at the Dreaming Gate itself, the boundary between worlds is nothing more than a shimmer of purple light. Characters who spend more than 1 hour within the Gatehouse must make a DC 12 WIS save or gain one level of exhaustion from psychic strain.

THE FOUR WINGS

- ◆ Dormitory (West): Collapsed bunks and rotting bedrolls. DC 13 Investigation finds a journal page: "Mordath spoke to us in dreams. 'I have seen my death. The Architect stirs in my dreams.'"
- ◆ Library (North): Partially intact shelves. "The Dreaming God: A Theological History" — Mordath was a mortal who ascended through collective dreams. The Architect is his fear of death given sentience.
- ◆ Chapel (East): The veil is thinnest here. 3 Nightmare Spawn emerge from the walls when anyone enters. DC 13 WIS save or pulled into a brief dream vision of Mordath pleading for help.
- ◆ Gate Hall (South): The climax. The Dreaming Gate — a massive portal of swirling purple energy. Through it: Mordath's white throne room and the dying god himself.

THE GATE HALL — APPROACHING THE PORTAL

"The Gate Hall opens onto the cliff edge. Before you stands the Dreaming Gate — thirty feet tall, filled with swirling purple energy. Through the portal: a white throne room. On the throne sits a figure robed in starlight, mask of cracked porcelain. Dying."

Between you and the portal stands a figure in purple armor, twin blades of crackling pink energy humming in its hands. It does not speak. But you feel its sorrow — a weight that presses against your chest like deep water.

BOSS: THE NIGHTMARE KNIGHT

Guardian of the Dreaming Gate

DANGER ●●●●●

The Nightmare Knight — A Dreambound soul guarding the gate, wields twin energy blades of crackling pink lightning

THE GUARDIAN

The Nightmare Knight is a Dreambound soul — a former guardian of the monastery who chose to stay and protect the gate even as the curse consumed everything. It is not evil, merely bound by duty. It fights to prevent anyone from approaching Mordath, believing that approaching the god will hasten his death and doom all Dreambound.

Social Encounter: The Knight can be reasoned with. DC 15 Persuasion check (DC 12 if the party has rescued Lissa or helped the Waking Guard). On success, it steps aside and warns: "The god is dying. What you do in there will determine whether the Dominion lives or dies. Choose wisely." On failure, it attacks.

Combat Encounter: If fought, this is a hard encounter for a level 3 party. The Knight fights defensively, trying to push characters away from the gate rather than kill them. It surrenders at 20 HP or below, saying: "You are determined. Perhaps... perhaps you are what he has been waiting for."

NIGHTMARE KNIGHT

MEDIUM UNDEAD, LAWFUL NEUTRAL

STR	DEX	CON	INT	WIS	CHA
18	14	18	12	14	16
+4	+2	+4	+1	+2	+3

AC 15 | HP 85 (10d8+40) | Speed 30 ft.

Resist: Necrotic, B/P/S nonmagical | Vuln: Radiant | Immune: Charmed, Exhaustion, Frightened, Poisoned

Multiattack. Two Energy Blades. Energy Blade. +7, 2d6+4 slashing + 1d8 psychic.

Life Drain (Recharge 5-6). +7, 3d6+4 psychic, heals half. Dream Step (Bonus). Teleport 30ft.

Parry (Reaction). +3 AC vs one melee. Legendary (1/round): Reposition. Move 15ft.

TOUCHING THE GATE

"The world dissolves into white. You stand in a vast throne room of white stone. On a cracked throne sits a figure robed in fading starlight. Its mask of porcelain is shattered, revealing a face that is both ancient and kind. It speaks directly into your mind: 'Three keys. Find them. The Architect wears my fear like a crown. The Crown lies in the Fractured Court. The Heart beats in the Dreaming Depths. Find them before the hollow ones consume everything. Please. I cannot hold on much longer.'"

Each character who touches the gate gains Dreamsense (detect dream-energy within 30 feet, always active) and a vision of three locations that will be explored in Books 2-5.

END OF BOOK 1

Mordath, the Three Keys, and a cliffhanger for Book 2

MORDATH — THE DYING GOD

Through the Dreaming Gate, the party has glimpsed the truth: Mordath is not the enemy. He is a dying god — once a mortal who ascended to divinity through the power of collective dreams, now consumed by his own fear of death. His curse is not malicious; it is the divine equivalent of a fever dream, the death-throes of a god who foresaw his own end and tried to prevent it. The purple dream-energy leaking into the Hollow Dominion is his life force, draining away as he fades.

Mordath's final message to the party was clear: three keys can resolve the curse. But what are they? The god's words were cryptic — "The Architect wears my fear like a crown. The Crown lies in the Fractured Court. The Heart beats in the Dreaming Depths." These are not physical keys, but fragments of Mordath's own divine essence, scattered across the Dominion as his mind fractures. Each key represents a part of what made him a god: his authority (the Architect/Crown), his sovereignty (the Fractured Court), and his compassion (the Heart/Dreaming Depths).

THE THREE KEYS

The Bronze Key — The Architect: The Architect is not a separate entity — it is Mordath's own fear of death, given sentience by the dying god's fractured psyche. It wears Mordath's divine authority like a crown, manipulating the Dreamseekers through Brother Caelum to build an army that will kill the god and allow the Architect to consume his divine essence. The Bronze Key is hidden within the Architect itself — it can only be claimed by confronting the source of Mordath's fear. This is the central conflict of Book 2: The Fractured Court.

The Silver Key — The Crown: The Crown of the Hollow Dominion — Mordath's symbol of divine authority — lies in the Fractured Court, the ruins of the Dominion's capital city. The Court is a place of shattered thrones and broken dreams, where the surviving nobility (the Veil Court) cling to power while nightmare creatures stalk the halls. The Silver Key is guarded by the Court's own twisted guardians — former courtiers consumed by dream-energy. This is the focus of Book 3.

The Gold Key — The Heart: Mordath's Heart — his divine compassion and the source of his power to create dreams — beats in the Dreaming Depths, a realm beyond the waking world where Mordath's consciousness is strongest. The Depths are a place of pure dream-stuff, where reality is fluid and thought becomes matter. The Gold Key is protected by the most powerful nightmare creatures — and by Mordath's own despair. This is the focus of Book 4.

CLIFFHANGER FOR BOOK 2

"As you leave the Gatehouse, you see them. A vast army of Unbound — hundreds strong — marching toward Drearym. At their head: Brother Caelum, eyes glowing purple, the Architect's symbol burning on his forehead. His 'sharing circle' was a trap. He's been converting Dreambound into Unbound, building an army to storm the Fractured Court and kill Mordath by force. And he's coming for you next."

The party must return to Drearym and warn Captain Ashford — but the army is only days away. The Dreamseekers have been growing in strength, and Brother Caelum's conversion rituals have created an army of nightmare-fueled fanatics. The race to find the three keys has begun — and the clock is ticking. If the Architect reaches Mordath first, the god will die, every Dreambound will perish with him, and the Hollow Dominion will become a realm of endless nightmare.

TREASURE & REWARDS

- Guardian's Longsword (uncommon, attunement)

+1 longsword. Extra 1d4 psychic vs undead/fiends. 1/day: detect thoughts (DC 13).
- Marta's Gratitude

If Lissa rescued: Potion of Greater Healing + Cloak of Elvenkind. Free lodging for the rest of the campaign.
- Monastery Journal

25gp value. DC 15 History reveals Fractured Court location (Book 2 starting point).
- Dreambound Sigil

Glows permanently. Identify other Dreambound. Advantage on saves vs nightmare effects.
- Milestone: Party reaches level 3.

GM NOTES

Tone: Waking up in someone else's nightmare. The horror is wrongness — familiar things made strange. The tragedy is that Mordath is not a villain; he's a dying god who created something beautiful that's being consumed by his own fear.

Moral Complexity: Neither the Waking Guard nor the Dreamseekers are wrong. The Guard wants to preserve Mordath's life. The Dreamseekers want to end the curse. Both conflict with the players' survival.

THE HOLLOW DOMINION

A once-prosperous kingdom cursed by the death-throes of Mordath, the Dreaming God. His nightmares leak into the waking world — twisting landscapes, corrupting creatures, and driving the populace mad.

The players are Dreambound — souls tethered to Mordath's fading consciousness. They cannot leave until the curse is broken. But if Mordath dies, they die with him.

From the Ashen Gate to the Gatehouse of Dreams, the party must navigate nightmare-ravaged lands, choose which faction to trust, and find the three keys that can save the Dominion — or doom it forever.

D&D 5e | Levels 1-3 | 3-4 Sessions | 3-5 Players

by Helm Evans

Tuco Enterprises